We are inviting healthy women to take part in a research study to improve our understanding of brain structure and function in relation to pain.

What will the study involve?

Participants will be asked to attend the hospital for one 90-minute visit. During this visit you will have a brain scan, be asked to give blood and saliva samples and to complete a questionnaire about your experience of pain and quality of life.

Who are we looking for?

Healthy women aged between 18-50 years of age, with no previous chronic pain (including painful periods), and no contraindications to having an MRI scan.

Participants will be reimbursed for their time.

If you are interested and would like any further information about the study, please contact:
